THE WESER FAMILY

FOREWORD

Five generations of the descendents of Ferdinand and Ursula Weser have lived in this country since they emigrated from Wurttemberg, Germany, in 1834. They came seeking greater opportunity for their children and had no cause to regret their decision for they not only found a land of endless opportunity but freedom and equality unknown on the continent of Europe.

Most of the family have continued to make their home in Washington, D.C., or in the vicinity for the past 112 years, since the family moved from Pennsylvania in 1836. It is hoped that all members of the family will enjoy reading this brief account and become sufficiently interested to keep it up to date. A copy has been filed with the Columbia Historical Society of Washington, D.C.

1. Ferdinand Weser (1)

THE IMMIGRANT

The first of the name in America was born in Wurttemberg in Southwest Germany in 1788. As a young man Ferdinand was a professional soldier and became an officer in the Imperial Bodyguard of Napoleon Bonaparte. After serving in a number of Napoleon's campaigns he was decorated with a medal of honor by the General for valor and devotion to duty. He suffered terribly in the famous retreat from Moscow in 1812. Upon Napoleon's abdication in April, 1814, Ferdinand accompanied him as one of his Honor Guard in his exile on the little Island of Elba. He remained there until 1815 when Napoleon, after escaping from Elba, received his final defeat at the Battle of Waterloo. Ferdinand then returned to Wurttemberg where he settled down and learned the trade of a watchmaker.

He married in 1823 Ursula _____ born January 6, 1799, in Wurttemberg, where also the three oldest children, Edward, Agnes and Aphalonia (b. 1833) were born. Although he was enjoying a successful career and had become Burgermeister of the town of Hockensolla, Ferdinand decided after the birth of Aphalonia that America offered greater opportunities for his children. Accordingly, the family emigrated to this country and settled in Pennsylvania in 1834 where their second son Emanuel (Monty) was born in the same year. It was a long hard trip requiring about five months. They traveled north through Germany for about 400 miles, embarking from Bremen on the Weser River.

It was in Pennsylvania that Ferdinand traded off a Swiss music box for land and a descendent of the recipient of the music box was in contact with the Weser family some years ago. It was here also that Ferdinand, who came over with considerable cash in his possession, was persuaded to go into a business venture in which Ferdinand was to supply the money and his partner, the experience. The net result was that in less than a year their positions were reversed. Ferdinand had the experience and his partner the cash. Following this the family moved to Washington, D.C., in 1836, where Mary and Charles were born and where Ferdinand continued to ply his trade as a watchmaker, living on the south side of E Street between 9th and 10th, N.W. He died about 1848. Ursula died February 1, 1885, at her residence at 320 14th Street, S.W., where the family made their home for many years.

2. Edward F. Weser (2)

Born in 1824 in Wurttemberg, Germany. He was 10 years old when the family emigrated to America. He married in 1848 Mary Ellen Simmons, born in 1837, who had two half-sisters, Louise and "Sis" Blackburn. After his marriage Edward's (Ned) brother Emanuel (Monty), age 14 and his sister Mary, age 11, lived with him for a few years, after the death of their father. Their mother and the other children lived with her daughter Agnes who married Caspar Schrepler. Ned developed and operated a famous oyster house in Washington, D.C., at 12th and E Streets, N.W. (now the site of the Harrington Hotel) for many years and owned considerable property in southwest Washington.

The Evening Star of February 21, 1907, contained a long article reporting his death and said in part: "For many years Mr. Weser had been engaged in the fish and oyster business in the District, and was intimately associated with the old river Captains and Potomac fishermen. He was manifestly a self-made man, and began his career hereabouts by working on the fishing shores as a seine hauler. He was much interested in his later years in oyster propagation. He feared the natural supply of the bivalves might become exhausted in time. ------- he was the only oyster dealer in the District to own his own oyster beds being the proprietor of a farm in St. Mary's County, Maryland, which had a water front of one and one-quarter miles. This front is along St. Patrick's Creek, and there was carried out a systematic plan of oyster propagation. -------- When steamed oysters first came into vogue here Mr. Weser provided himself with a gigantic iron pot, in which the oysters in wire cages were dipped into boiling water and served steaming hot to his patrons, many of whom were the famous men of that day."

After his death on February 19, 1907, at the age of 83, there was considerable litigation for a period of several years among his children concerning the ownership of the Oyster House and the associated real estate. The case was finally settled by the D. C. Supreme Court in 1911 in favor of Charles H. Weser. The farm in St. Mary's County and other property were disposed of about this time.

Mary, who owned and ran a drygoods store of her own, died November 30, 1907.

Caspar was a carpenter and after his death in 1867, Agnes opened and operated for 33 years fish stands in the Old Center Market and the Western Market. She was a great favorite of her Beitzell nephews and nieces who visited her often at her residence at 320 14th Street, S.W. Her brother-in-law, John Schrepler, made his home here for many years. 5. Emanuel Weser (2)

Born in January, 1834, in Pennsylvania. His family moved to Washington, D.C., in 1836, where he made his home all of his life. He was a skillful plasterer and his services were always in demand. Uncle "Monty" as was his habit in his last years, laid down the afternoon of June 4, 1909, for his customary afternoon nap and never awakened. He did not marry.

6. Mary A. Weser Beitzell (2)

Born September 13, 1837, in Washington, D.C., she married Josiah Beitzell on November 16, 1859. The Weser and Beitzell families lived near each other in Washington and Mary and Josiah grew up together. It is entirely possible that their parents knew each other in Pennsylvania since both families moved to Washington about the same time. Shortly after his brother-in-law, Ned Weser, opened an oyster house in 1863, Josiah started to run oysters and other produce from the Potomac River and the Chesapeake Bay. By the time that Mary and Josiah moved to Virginia, late in 1865, he had a fleet of four boats of the schooner type. Josiah stated in moving from Washington that his experiences as a policeman in the Auxiliary Guard in 1860 had convinced him that there was too much wickedness in cities to bring up a family decently and Mary was in hearty agreement. This together with the heart breaking experience of losing their first two children in a diptheria epidemic in 1865 made them anxious to settle in the country

Josiah had won $7,500 in a lottery (one-half of $15,000 he and Gwynn Harris won in the Louisiana State lottery) and being well established in his business set out to find a suitable farm on the water front.

The family first located at Coan River, Virginia, where their second son, Josiah Edward was born May 20, 1867. Their oldest son John was born in Washington, D.C., April 4, 1865. After a short stay they moved to a place called Kents where Ernest and Rosa were born. From there they went to Fleets Bay on the Chesapeake in Lancaster County, Virginia, near the little town of Kilmarnock. There they rented the plantation of Adolphus Harding, intending to buy. Josiah being a waterman and knowing little about farming had William Chitwood run the plantation. He was the Grandfather of Laura Lankford who married John Beitzell. It was at Fleets Bay that the remaining children, Charles, Mary and George were born and where they lived for about 12 years. The family loved company and always had the house full of visiting relatives and friends. Bishop (later Cardinal) Gibbons was a visitor on several occasions.

Josiah had wanted to buy the plantation but Mr. Harding didn't want to sell and finally decided to occupy the place himself. The family lived for a short time at Indian Creek (Clifton Farm) before moving to Canoe Neck Creek on St. Clements Bay in St. Mary's County, Maryland, where they purchased the farm Collingwood from Andrew Jackson Cheseldine in 1882. There were several considerations involved in the move to Maryland. Mary wanted to be located in a place where there was a Catholic Church near so that the children could be brought up properly in her faith and Josiah wished to be located on the Potomac River which was his best source of oysters and otherproduce. After the move to Maryland Josiah continued to follow the water in his favorite schooner, the "Rosie B," until his death October 23, 1884, plying the Potomac and the Chesapeake. He died a communicant of the Catholic Church and he and Mary, who died April 14, 1890 are buried at Sacred Heart Church, Bushwood, Maryland.

He sailed with his father as a youth and was captain of his own schooner at 19. On April 9, 1891 he married Laura A. Lankford, a striking Virginia beauty and a friend from childhood. 26. Josiah Edward Beitzell (3)

Born May 20, 1867, at Coan River, Virginia, Joe lived in Virginia until he was 16 years of age, when his father moved to St. Mary's County, Maryland. He never forgot Virginia or his youth at Fleets Bay and in his 80th year recalls many events of his youth there. On November 21, 1888 he married Mary Elizabeth Norris born March 6, 1865, the daughter of John Hanson and Jane (Cheseldine) Norris.

Joe has been mainly a waterman all his life, although he made full use of his modest farm. After the death of his father, Collingwood was divided into three farms. The home place was taken over by John and later Mary and the remainder divided between Rosa and Joe, after settlement had been made with the other children. Joe has always been progressive and never lacked initiative. He was the first on that part of the Potomac River to fish trap nets with which he was very successful, taking as many as 70,000 herring and several hundred shad at one fishing. He also oystered during the season and was one of the few rivermen who obeyed both the fish and oyster laws scrupulously. His was the first artesian well in the area (there isn't any better drinking water), he wasthe first riverman along that part of the Potomac to convert from sails to gasoline engine and his gas lights and bathroom were the early "wonders" of the neighborhood.

He has always been an industrious and highly respected citizen of the community and has served as a trustee of the Public School and the County Hospital. He is a sturdy member of the Church and his life has been a continuing example of clean and honest living for his children. Quite often when the weather was good, Joe took his family across St. Clements Bay to Newtown Church, in his motor boat "The Defender," just as his parents had sailed there in earlier days. At other times the family worshipped at Holy Angels Chapel. At 80, his love for the river has not abated and every good day sees him on the river in another "Defender," a mighty cantankerous and slow boat in these fast modern times but still able to get the "Captain" where he wants to go.

Elizabeth died on August 17, 1925 and is buried at Sacred Heart Church, Bushwood, Maryland. On June 20, 1927, Joe married secondly Mrs. Katy (Huseman) Anderson, a widow with three daughters, Gladys, Lorraine and Frances. There were no children born of this marriage. Children:

Born June 6, 1869, in Kents, Virginia. As a young man he left the family home in St. Mary's County, Maryland, and located in Washington, D.C. He made a considerable fortune in the wholesale liquor business and as a heavy stockholder in the Crandall Theatre chain. He also operated the famous crab house on the boardwalk at Chesapeake Beach for several seasons.

On November 9, 1898 he married Margaret M. Cumberland of Washington, D.C., born February 22, 1874. Margaret (Maggie) is a great story-teller and her account of some of their early automobile trips to St. Mary's County about 1912-1916 are classics. She claims to have walked most of the way more times than not. In an effort to establish an industry near his old home in Kilmarnock, at Reedsville, Virginia, Ernest lost most of his fortune in a large purse netting (fishing) venture due to several bad seasons in succession which forced practically all of the fishermen on the bay into bankruptcy. However with undiminished vigor and courage he was staging a comeback in business when ill health forced his retirement. He died on May 27, 1942, after a lingering illness and is buried in Mt. Olivet Cemetery in Washington, D.C. Children:

58. I. Mary Louise (4) b. March 15, 1901

Born March 7, 1871, in Kents, Virginia, she married on November 17, 1886, William Lawrence, born February 27, 1858, in St. Mary's County, Maryland. Rosa inherited part of the home place, Collingwood, where they made their home for many years and where all of the children were born. In 1916 they sold the farm to a nephew, Arthur Lawrence, and the family moved to Washington, D.C., where they made their home for the rest of their lives. William died June 28, 1929 and Rosa on May 18, 1930. Children:

29. Charles Henry Beitzell (3)

Born September, 1873, at Fleets Bay, Kilmarnock, Virginia, he spent most of his boyhood in St. Mary's County, Maryland, where the family moved in 1882. He married in May, 1911, Lelia V. Cheseldine, born October 22, 1876, daughter of Andrew Jackson Cheseldine. After her death on July 5, 1914, he married on October 25, 1916 her sister, Mary Ida Cheseldine, born in 1882. Charlie was the adventurer of this generation and after being disappointed in a love affair, struck out on the Klondike gold rush in the late 90's. His adventures were many, real and varied. He participated in the hanging of a camp murderer, after a fair trial, out-faced a Grizzly on the trail and was near starvation on a wilderness trek when rescued by friendly Indians. It is hoped that he will set-down the details of these and many other adventures before he starts out on his final trek. After the gold rush days, he settled down in the Imperial Valley in California near Upland and farmed.

He came East briefly in 1911 to marry Lelia Cheseldine and returned to California. He remained there for only a few years as Lelia became ill and he brought her back home to White's Neck, St. Mary's County, Maryland, where she died shortly thereafter, on July 5, 1914. He then purchased St. Catherine's Island which had been in the Cheseldine family since 1673, set-up bachelor's quarters thereon and proceeded to whip the island into good farming condition. The recorder of this account and his cousins, Dick and Joe Gibson, spent many happy vacations with Uncle Charlie, hunting rabbits, fishing and swimming in the "Narrows" and riding horseback. Their greatest thrill was being allowed to sleep in the barn on the hay when the house was being rebuilt. On October 25, 1916 he married Ida Cheseldine and they lived on the Island until getting the children to school became a problem. He then sold the Island and purchased a farm "Hard Bargain," near Bushwood in St. Mary's County and has brought this farm up from a very run-down state to a first class farm. He enjoys a well earned reputation in the County as an able and progressive farmer.

Ida, who was loved and respected by the whole community died May, 1947. Lelia and Ida are buried at Sacred Heart Church, Bushwood, Maryland.

All of the children were born on the farm and they made their home there for many years until shortly before Edwin's death, which occurred on March 24, 1945, when they moved to Washington, D.C.
